Publishers introduction

Now what can be said about Deans poetry as a whole well a burning ambience of burning flames a resplendence of words a blinding atmosphere of sounds a heated brain oozing its blood-red sap hot with fervent ferment poetry being a flaming landscape and for the middle class from a mind on the brink of the pathological from a diseased mind fall of ravishing chimeras Deans poetry is the audible of the madrigals of Monteverdi the imagery of the paintings of van Gough Dean is an enchantress mesmerizing us under the spell of his incantatory lines his heated rhythms his bursting bubbles of hyperbatons his exquisite malapropisms Dean conveys in marvelous language in his poetry a world which is hidden a world that needs deciphering that world be the world of the erotic the world of the sensual the world of the emotions his words become flames his rhythms become burning crystals of fire his poetry rages with life full of melodic colors intense and fever pitched raising the reciters to paroxysms of quivering exhaustion his words become liquid gold his lines a conflagration of burning fever his images solidify into gems into light frozen forms raging up to captivate us to thrill us to send us into emotional exhaustion Deans poetry is the work of a mind boiling with the larva of desires his poetry forms into flesh trembling pulsating his poems to the middle class are of a demented mind a diseased mind a mind frantic with radiant symphonies bursting with intense sensualities Dean is a diabolical alchemist of words where his crucible is the minds of his listeners his poems are full of exuberances full of excesses of full of rapturous extravagances the intense expression of intense desires Deans brain boils and overflows into the sublime the overabundance of the beautiful like a van Gough sunflower it hurts our senses with it burning voluptuousness with its ferocious sounds and images coated in pearly light on fire his work is the poetry of the abnormal of a tormented mind with emotional intensities on the edge on the brink no amidst the pathological wallowing in the flame-like sensuality of his desires on fire of his desires in excess a feverish soul boiling with the excess of feeling Now to Latroductus what can be said that has not above this poem is pathological it is monstrous in its macabreness but sublime in its grotesqueness the work of a disturbed nature pouring out his inexhaustible larva of burning words burning ideas that disturb yet elevate one to the heights of orgasmic delight captivate enchant what more need be said for this work of delirious pathology deliriums of a sick mind
